

Lighting Design for Public Space

Clear Story has been collaborating with architects, developers and non-profit community organizations for more than a decade, creating thoughtful and energy-efficient designs for lighting in public spaces. In its first collaboration with Hood Design Studio, Clear Story created a functional, atmospheric and dramatic lighting design for backyard theatrical performances and community events at the historic August Willson House in Pittsburgh’s Hill District. Working with Sasaki and a team of renowned professionals, Clear Story crafted an illumination strategy for the East Liberty Transit Center that highlights texture and landscape contours, making use of translucent and reflective material properties while delivering a safe and sophisticated public realm experience after dark. And to enhance the magic of an intimate garden dining experience, the firm worked with mossArchitects to focus light on the living and climbing landscape that envelops the hidden courtyard at Pusadee’s Garden.

In its lighting design practice, Clear Story emphasizes the interrelationship of the natural and built environment in amenity spaces like these, amplifying a connection that delivers a more balanced experience of context and elevated sense of place.
